Bay Pavilions Sustainability Plan

At next Tuesday's council Meeting it is recommended THAT Council receive and note The Bay Pavilions Sustainability Plan 2024.

The Business paper says "The Plan has been developed in response to the high operational costs of the Bay Pavilions and the need to strategically manage and mitigate ongoing operational expenses and risks, as identified in three external, independent reviews undertaken in 2023 and via internal Council assessment. The pre-construction operating cost estimates, as reported to Council, significantly underestimated the cost of running the facility. Figures of $330,000 and $338,570, reducing to $110,000 - 113,0040 by year 10 were included in a number of Council reports, in 2017, 2018 and 2020.

The total actual cost currently sits at $5,062,000 (2023-24), with the anticipated cost for the next 10 years estimated to remain between $5-$6 million per annum. This includes all costs, including contract and materials, depreciation, energy costs, maintenance and insurance. This provides a significant challenge.

The development of the Bay Pavilions Sustainability Plan is a key action in Council's Finance Strategy 2024-2028.

The facility is popular and well utilised, welcoming 288,131 visitors in 2023-24. This figure is 8% higher than visitor numbers for the previous year. The Plan aims to optimise business and financial opportunities within this context, enabling positive community benefits and service delivery outcomes at the facility.

The Plan includes three strategic themes, aligned to the Finance Strategy and supported by 26 Actions and associated measures. Each action is prioritised, with 10 High, 11 Medium, 1 Low and 4 ongoing ratings in place.

Resourcing the delivery of the Plan will be achieved using existing staff and contractors, with work already begun on nine of the 26 actions."

The Bay Pavilions is popular and well utilised, welcoming 288,131 visitors in 2023-24. This is up 8% on the previous year.

Key activities in the 2023-24 year include:

- 62 shows. This was a focus area and is up 15% on the previous year, with further plans for more shows and programming of the theatre space and associated rooms.
- 615 Learn to swim participants. This is on par with the previous year.
- 42 hour long live Classes with teacher per week, 162 hour long virtual classes per week, providing a total of 204 hours of classes per week.
- 10 Aqua Classes each week in the 25m pool, with 400 people per week attending. Council is focused on increasing this offering.
- 3 aqua mobility classes in the warm water pool, accommodating 36 people per week.
- There has been significant improvement in the café both in the service and offerings. This has resulted in improved profitability at the Café. These operations will be monitored monthly to ensure continued improvement.
- 424 meeting room bookings. This is up from 344 in 22/23, which is a 23% increase. There will be focus on further increasing usage.

Pump up your tyres – Mogo Trails open 17 August

The eastern section of Mogo Trails opens on Saturday 17 August. Rocky Trail's Martin Wisata said his work crews from Next Level MTB are getting 70 kilometres ready to ride by Saturday. "If the weather is kind to us that might well be 80 kilometres," Mr Wisata said.

Mr Wisata said the trails are modern, innovative and inclusive. "These trails are truly special; from the super-easy white trails to the most challenging double blacks, the network is designed to cater to every riding and racing ambition, whether you're a seasoned mountain biker, a gravity enthusiast, an adaptive rider, or a newbie looking to hone your skills," he said. "We've made sure everyone gets back to the start without having to tackle tracks beyond their skills."

For now, the eastern trails will continue to roll out to a total of around 90 kilometres. Eurobodalla Council's Mogo Trails project manager Shane Spicer said some trails originally planned for west of the highway had been moved to the east.

"We're bringing more of the trail closer to communities and facilities and taking advantage of favourable east-side geology," Mr Spicer said.

"But don't worry, the west side will still be epic, with an awesome remote drop point and trails with a real sense of adventure."

Mr Spicer said the official date for the complete network of about 130 kilometres will be in early-2025.

"With such a huge network of trails, there's a lot to consider before opening," Mr Spicer said. "We want to make sure everyone who visits has an awesome experience – this means not just having amazing trails but also getting the parking, restrooms, and signage just right."

"Building a bike park of this scale is relatively new in this country. It has brought its own set of challenges but nothing Council's and Rocky Trail's teams couldn't handle. We're pretty proud of what we've done so far and can't wait to share it with everyone."

Mogo Trails is funded by the Commonwealth and NSW Government's Bushfire Local Economic Recovery Fund and the Restart NSW Growing Local Economies fund.

Mayor Hatcher said Mogo Trails was more than just a new recreational opportunity: "It's a fantastic economic driver for the region's recovery. After the devastation of the bushfires, these trails will bring visitors and investment, helping to boost our local economy and support the community well into the future."

"It's great to see local businesses gearing up for the influx of visitors, thanks to Council's ride-ready programs and initiatives."

Eurobodalla Council and Batemans Bay Mountain Bike Club will host a community ride day to provide tours for all rider levels. Save the date for Saturday 5 October.

Powerful Pollinators New exhibition for National Science Week

Come celebrate National Science Week at Batemans Bay Heritage Museum. As part of the Science Week theme for 2024: Species Survival – more than just Sustainability, we're shining a light on the importance of bees and other insect pollinators for food security and ecosystem health in our new exhibition Powerful Pollinators which opened this week.

Insects work tirelessly around us to provide pollination for food crops and native vegetation, and in doing this they ensure that we have food on the table, and that our ecosystems remain stable. But pollinators are threatened by habitat destruction and widespread pesticide use. It is crucial that we pay attention to their often-overlooked role in our lives, and address the challenges they face. Our exhibition highlights the important role insects play in putting food on our table and maintaining the ecosystem around us, and provides opportunity for visitors to learn more about their services, and what we can do in our backyards to support the health of our pollinators. Pop into the Museum to learn why we would have no apple, avocado, almond or blueberry crops if it wasn't for honeybees, and why you won't find any native bees moving into your garden hive. Marvel at the fluffy cuteness of the blue banded native in gorgeous close-up photography by members of the Eurobodalla Photographic Society, inspect our vintage honey extractor, and join us for workshop to build an insect hotel for your backyard or balcony.

The Museum is open Wednesday to Friday 10-3 and Saturday 10-2.

NFF urges against complacency following 3G shutdown extension

The National Farmers' Federation has welcomed news today the 3G network closure will be extended, with Telstra and Optus launching a public safety awareness campaign to make sure people take action.

NFF President David Jochinke said while people now had until October 28 to prepare, it was important they didn't leave it to the last minute.

"This is not the time to take a 'she'll be right' attitude. I urge people to check their devices urgently and make sure they are compatible with the 4G and 5G networks," Mr Jochinke said.

Beyond mobile phones, the NFF urged rural Australians to think about what other technologies might be using the 3G network. This includes ag tech such as livestock and dog trackers, weather stations, soil moisture probes, yield monitors and variable rate technology.

There's also security cameras, EFTPOS machines, medical monitors, 3G landlines (NGWL), repeaters, antennas and electronic road signs.

"If you don't know whether your device runs on the 3G network, you must contact the manufacturer to find out. Make sure this is on the top of your priority list. Mr Jochinke added this was the second extension by Telstra and it was time for action. "We can't keep prolonging the inevitable. Let's use this time wisely and then start focusing on how we move forward and address the systemic issues facing rural connectivity."

Public hearings on healthcare funding held in Batemans Bay

The Special Commission of Inquiry into Healthcare Funding held public hearings in Batemans Bay on 15 and 16 August 2024 at the Batemans Bay Soldiers Club.

The public were only informed of this on the Monday prior.

The public hearings provided an opportunity for the Inquiry to hear from a wide range of witnesses, including representatives from the public sector, healthcare representative bodies, service providers and community members.

In the Batemans Bay hearings, the Inquiry gathered evidence about a range of healthcare issues relevant to the region including:

1. Funding challenges and opportunities for improvement.
2. Healthcare workforce, including recruitment, retention, shortages and premium labour issues.
3. Education and training opportunities and limitations.
4. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander health services, workforce development and support programs.
5. Access to specialist healthcare, including public specialist outreach services and Specialist Networks that facilitate specialist virtual healthcare between metro and regional facilities.
6. Links and opportunities for collaboration between healthcare providers, including primary health care and networks, Local Health Districts, private healthcare and Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Organisations.

7. Innovation and new models of care to improve health outcomes for the people of NSW.

8. Issues relating to the construction of Eurobodalla Regional Hospital and Batemans Bay Community Health Facility and the closure of services at Batemans Bay Hospital.

The Inquiry invited members of the public to observe proceedings by attending in person or by live streaming the hearings. Live streaming links were available on the website.

In the days before the hearings, the Commissioner and members of the Inquiry team visited health facilities and engaged with local stakeholders and community members in Bega, Cooma, Bombala and Batemans Bay.

The Commission ventilated on Thursday that "yesterday, we met with a group of residents in Batemans Bay who have shared with us their concerns about the location of the new hospital which is being developed in Moruya, and the allied proposal that once that new hospital is opened, the emergency department at Batemans Bay Hospital will be closed and repurposed as a community facility. Each of them has provided statements in which they set out their concern. We understand that those statements will be tendered and the extent of their evidence. We understand that neither the ministry nor the local health district wishes to cross-examine them on those statements, and in those circumstances they won't be called to give any further oral evidence, but their statements and their story has been heard and is part of the evidence of the Commission."

Landholders paid to protect native vegetation on private property

More NSW landholders than ever are being paid to protect native plants and animals on their land through funded agreements with the NSW Government.

The NSW Biodiversity Conservation Trust has seen a steady year-on-year increase in farmers and rural property owners seeking to protect their land with a conservation agreement.

The Trust's Manager of Private Land Conservation Programs, Cath Gallery, said the most recent opportunity invited landowners with important native habitat on their land to apply for a fixed price per hectare, paid each year, and registered on the land's title.

"Each time we open the new fixed price offer rounds, we get more and more interest from landholders," Ms Gallery said. "The last round, that closed at the end of February, resulted in almost twice the number of expressions of interest than the previous, and we expect this trend to continue."

Through their fixed price offer rounds, the NSW Biodiversity Conservation Trust supports landholders in high-priority areas who have important native vegetation on their land to manage these sites for conservation, in return for a fixed annual payment.

More than 76,000 hectares are protected under fixed price agreements with the NSW Biodiversity Conservation Trust, across 45 agreements. The median annual payment per hectare is $90, paid for the life of the agreement.

The conservation areas protected by landowners feature endangered ecological communities with a wide variety of eucalypt and other native trees, shrubs and grasses, along with the animal and bird species that call them home.

Expert ecologists and landholder support staff provide ongoing guidance and advice to landholders managing conservation areas.

Ms Gallery said the specialist help takes the onus off landholders to know exactly what they have, and how to manage it.

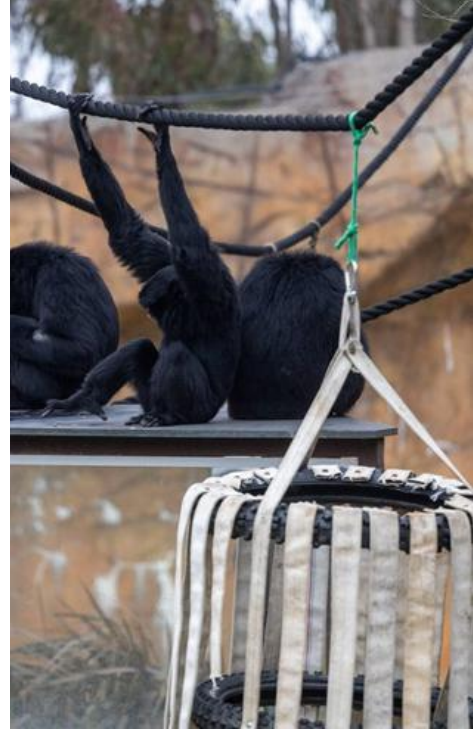

"Landholders are telling us they want to protect their land, but they need help to get started. Our team is on the ground delivering the support landholders are asking for."

The NSW Biodiversity Conservation Trust is accepting expressions of interest for its ninth round of fixed price offers, open until 1 March. To learn more, visit www.bct.nsw.gov.au/fixed-price-offers or phone 1300 992 688.

Rolling out the RFS Recycling

NSW Rural Fire Service reports of a great recycling initiative.

"While they serve us well on the fire ground, hoses don't last forever. So, where we can, we like to give them a second life beyond the station. Members of the Lake George District delivered a batch of old hoses to the National Zoo & Aquarium Canberra. They'll be put to use in animal enclosures as climbing ropes, hammocks and enrichment items. It's always a good day when you can help out a pri-mate!"

Grandchildren are amazing, they do such clever things. For example, they grow older at the speed of light. Or so it seems.

Our four are scattered over Sydney and Canberra, and we mostly interact with the two Canberra girls, Aria and Allegra, 14 and 13 respectively. Both are quite beautiful and though they have very different personalities each rejoices in a delightful sense of humour. Aria was beautiful from the moment of birth; Allegra took a while (five minutes in grandchild time) to graduate from cute to stunning and is already taller than her tall sister.

Both are very bright but unlike Allegra, Aria was uncomfortable at her Steiner School and didn't really flower academically until she joined her old primary school friends at Melrose High. That's where she shot to the top of the maths class and to the general astonishment of even her doting grandparents, scored 100 percent in a tough test. She actually beat the perennial winner, the Singapore Chinese-Australian boy who only managed a paltry 98!

Amazing. Not least because the genes she inherited from our side were pretty much innumerate. However, in recent months I have stumbled across a question that has kept me awake at nights. I'm sharing it with her, but all readers are welcome to join the hunt for an answer.

Here 'tis: Is mathematics a human invention or a discovery of something that was always there? Aria's first response was, 'a discovery', but after a while she seemed much less certain. For example, prime numbers – those that can only be divided by one and themselves – reveal no discernible pattern.

On the other hand, my instinctive response was 'an invention' but if so, how come it's so useful in all branches of science (except, perhaps, quantum mechanics).

Google is not much help. It simply ranges over the possibilities without reaching any conclusion. And some scientists duck the question by saying it's both. I guess that works – more or less – if you see it as a function of our evolving consciousness; the patterns we divine in our surroundings become increasingly complex until we can only express them through the 'language' of mathematics. But then in one of those coincidences that become increasingly common as you grow older, I happened upon a New Scientist that asked the same question in a different form in their brain teasing back pages: 'Did abstract mathematics such as Pythagoras's theorem exist before the big bang?'

That elicited lots of answers, most of which said there were two schools of thought – the religious believers said, 'yes' and the others 'no'. There was even one that said there's no such thing as 'before' the big bang.

Another said, 'There are those mathematicians who believe mathematics is invented, for whom the answer is 'no' because there was nobody to write it down, and those who believe it is discovered the answer is 'yes'. because we can prove a solution exists.

I was attracted to the contribution from one Simon McLeish from Gloucestershire who raised the possibility that 'pure mathematics doesn't really exist at all – never has and never will -mathematics is about abstract objects that ignore reality. For example, a line without width couldn't exist in the real world, but that is a property of a line in geometry. The numbers that are used to measure the sides of a right-angled triangle have a mathematical precision far finer than could be obtained from a real-life triangle.

'Perfection is the soul of mathematical thinking,' Simon said, 'but it never existed in the real world.'

But of course, neither did the 'soul'.

A Beer with Bazz #162

With John
Longhurst

Mick straightened his shoulders.

"It's very straightforward and if you are not doing it..... well poor fool you..... it means you subsidise blokes like me who are pretty good at it."

Mick pulled out his phone, scrolled and tapped the flybuys app.

“Ok you blokes..... watch and learn. First up, you have to maximise your points. That means shopping at places that sign up to flybuys.”

Bazza took a sip and rubbed his chin.

"But Mick...what if you want to buy something from a shop that does not recognise flybuys?"

Mick openly sighed and tapped his phone.

"Don't be difficult, Bazza. If you are going to be a serious collector of points you have to make the odd sacrifice. Now, here is a list of retailers that recognise flybuys. If you cannot get what you need from that list there is something wrong with you."

Mick paused for a sip.

"Now let's get back on track. It is not just a case of shopping at the right store but shopping smarter. You have to work the system. Here in my emails are the promos and if I spend $170 in one transaction before 16th August I get 6800 bonus flybuys points."

Mick let out a deep breath, Timeless Tom's eyelids became heavy and Bazza motioned to speak.

“No need Bazza...I know what you are going to say. You just have to try hard to make sure you spend the $170 in a single transaction. You have to use a bit of imagination to reap the rewards. Now... a little tip for everyday shopping. At the supermarket checkout it is important to stop the cashiers on each spend of $30 and ask them to start a new transaction. You will get more points for separate transactions.”

Timeless Tom's head leaned towards his shoulder and Bazza chuckled.

"You can't be serious, Mick.... so on a shop of say $150... you ask the cashier for five separate transactions. The people behind you must want to throttle you."

Mick bit his bottom lip and positioned his phone on the bar table.

"Skin in the game, Bazza. It's all about maximising your points. I admit it can get a bit stressful but check out my efforts. I have 173,964 flybuys points which converts to $869.52. Now.... you also need to spend the points in the smartest possible way."

Mick scrolled through his phone for a few minutes as Timeless Tom let out a snore.

"Ok Bazza... here's the best deal. A hairdryer for 7000 flybuys points. That is a great deal and I would be mad to pass on that one."

Bazza took a long sip and fixed his gaze on Mick's bald head.

"Yep...mad is the word, Mick. Now how long would you spend working through all these tricks?"

"Hours upon hours, Bazza. In fact, I plan my day around accumulating as many points as I can."

Bazza rubbed his forehead.

"Out of curiosity, Mick...do you reckon the time spent rewards you to the same extent as your hourly rate of pay?"

Mick blinked a number of times and Timeless Tom shook himself awake.

"Don't be ridiculous, Bazza. Anyhow, I've got to get to work on spending that $170 before midnight or I will miss out on the 6800 bonus points."

New blue plaque honours Aboriginal healthcare pioneer

Relatives of the late Aboriginal healthcare pioneer Emma Jane Callaghan have gathered in Sydney for the unveiling of a blue plaque to commemorate and celebrate her remarkable life and contributions to the rich heritage of NSW.

Born in the Sydney suburb of La Perouse in 1884, Emma Jane Callaghan was an Aboriginal nurse, midwife, missionary and advocate who dedicated her life to breaking barriers in healthcare and advocating for the rights of Aboriginal people.

Ms Callaghan was a pioneer in her field, working as a primary healthcare worker on Aboriginal reserves at La Perouse, Bellbrook and Armidale.

At a time when some hospitals would refuse admission to Aboriginal patients, Ms Callaghan opened her home as an impromptu hospital, sickbay and venue to meet people who needed assistance. She also worked for the Aborigines' Protection Board and lobbied for the dole and civil rights for Aboriginal people.

Ms Callaghan was a mother to 11 children. She continued her work caring for the ill and delivering babies for those on reserves until she was 78 years old. She died in 1979, aged 95.

The Minns Labor Government is committed to protecting, restoring and enhancing heritage and sharing stories from our past with the wider population. This blue plaque is a testament to a woman who fearlessly brought healthcare into the heart of the community, and the NSW Government is ensuring her story is shared with generations to come.

The Blue Plaques NSW program celebrates both well-known and lesser-known stories of people and events that shaped the rich heritage of NSW.

This blue plaque is one of 14 chosen from 117 nominations made by the public in the second round of Blue Plaques NSW.

For more information about Emma Jane Callaghan visit online.

Minister for Heritage Penny Sharpe said 'The blue plaque for Emma Jane Callaghan recognises and honours her tireless dedication to improving healthcare for Aboriginal communities and advocating for their rights.'

'It serves as a powerful reminder of her significant contributions and of Australia's ongoing journey toward equality and reconciliation.'

'Thank you to relatives of Emma Jane Callaghan and the La Perouse Aboriginal Land Council for advocating for this special recognition of an extraordinary woman.'

Kodie Mason, great, great, great granddaughter of Emma Jane Callaghan said 'I nominated my grandmother Emma Jane Callaghan for a blue plaque because her story deserves to be told and remembered. Granny was a remarkable woman who dedicated her life to Aboriginal health. At La Perouse she was affectionately known as 'Lady' as she was very well respected and cared for everyone in need.'

'She was a strong voice for her people and this plaque is a fitting tribute to her legacy.'

EPA CEO calls for united front to tackle e-waste at industry summit
NSW Environment Protection Authority
NSW Environment Protection Authority (EPA) CEO, Tony Chappel, reiterated the need for a collective approach to batteries at the Australian Battery Recycling and Manufacturing Summit yesterday. Mr Chappel's address highlighted the power of collaborating to find solutions to complex issues like creating a circular economy for batteries and safe disposal pathways.
Mr Chappel said we're looking at the issue from battery design to manufacturing and how they are used, all the way through to how they are handled when they reach end-of-life.

"We are committed to listening and learning so we can help to bring your ideas and perspectives to life in regulation.

"If we take a whole-system approach, we can get the policy setting right and minimise the risks to people and the environment, while simultaneously harnessing the benefits of batteries to power our net zero economy."

Following the Environment Ministers meeting in June, NSW is leading the work to accelerate product stewardship reform for all batteries, in collaboration with Queensland and Victoria. The EPA is currently working on a draft Regulatory Impact Statement assessing options for reforming stewardship arrangements for all battery types. It will also identify the most cost-efficient ways to reduce battery related fires while enabling a circular economy transition.

During the address Mr Chappel advised the EPA is currently exploring ways to make embedded battery recycling more accessible. Mr Chappel invited industry to share their insights and feedback as the EPA progresses work in this space.

Have your say on Torrens title for R2 zoning

ESC is investigating opportunities to increase housing affordability and diversity. As you are aware, the tools available to councils are limited but we can influence housing density by encouraging dual occupancy.

We have prepared a draft amendment to the Eurobodalla Local Environmental Plan 2012 that permits Torrens title subdivision of dual occupancy development on land in the R2 Low Density Residential Zone. Supporting amendments to the Residential Zones Development Control Plan are also proposed.

We believe Torrens title subdivisions may increase dual occupancy in our shire. This could lead to more diverse housing options without significantly changing existing levels of amenity or the capacity of services and infrastructure. Council already permits Torrens title subdivision of medium-density housing development under clause 4.1C of the LEP.

The draft amendment is currently on public exhibition for comment. Submission close 11 September 2024.

If you need any further clarification, you can contact Council's Strategy and Place team: ·E: Strategy and Place ·T: 02 4474 1020

BUILDING A BRIGHTER FUTURE FOR THE COMMUNITY COMMUNITY WORKSHED AGM Wednesday 28th August 2024

It takes a village to raise a child. The Moruya village has embraced this concept through a Community Workshed organisation, located at Moruya High School.

The registered Community Workshed Incorporation encourages inclusiveness. Everyone is welcomed.

Current Development Applications in Eurobodalla

Eurobodalla Council provides ready access to development proposals that have been approved, or are on exhibition for community members to view and provide their feedback.

For information on how to make a submission, download the 'Making a submission factsheet' within the proposal's related documents.

You will find the FULL current list of pending and approved on Council's website HERE

Track a development Proposal on Exhibition

Council may notify a Development Application (DA) where the proposal:

- is considered to have a potential impact on adjoining and adjacent properties, or
- does not meet a standard in the acceptable solutions of the Development Control Plan (DCP).

Community members can view these proposals and give feedback online during the exhibition period at:

- View development proposals on exhibition: notifications
- Council must notify and exhibit a DA in line with the:

Community Engagement Strategy (1.0 MB).

How to lodge a submission

During the exhibition period, community members can give feedback about a proposal. They can do this by making an online submission to Council:

1. Find the development proposal you want to make a submission about on Council's DA tracker.
2. Click on the DA number (application ID).
3. Read the 'Making a submission fact sheet' at the bottom of the page.
4. Click on the 'Lodge submission' button.
5. Complete the submission, upload any documents and click on the 'Submit' button.

The assessing officer will review any submissions received and may ask the applicant to respond to the issues raised. This will occur before the assessing officer determines the application.

Introducing Jed!

This handsome older boy is a Kelpie x Labrador who is just waiting to make someone the perfect pet. Jed adores human company, loves long walks, sleeps in the sun, and being by your side whatever you are doing.

Jed's fun-loving nature makes him great with other dogs, and good with children, although he's a bit wary of the real littlies. He travels well in the car and warms to people quickly. Jed has not been tested with cats. Jed is desexed, vaccinated and flea, tick and worm treated, and he could be yours for $250. Who says you can't buy love? Call AWL on 0410016612 to arrange a meeting.

Marine Rescue NSW volunteers respond to almost 250 calls for assistance in July

Despite the cool weather experienced across the state last month, Marine Rescue NSW was in demand with volunteers completing 242 search and rescue missions, including 81 emergency responses.

Marine Rescue NSW Commissioner Alex Barrell said the skill and dedication displayed by the Service's 3,400 volunteers meant hundreds of boaters were safely returned to shore in July.

"The rapid response from our crews ensured that almost 400 people on board disabled or distressed vessels were able to return home to family and friends after their voyage on state's waterways didn't go to plan," he said.

44% of missions in July were for engine, fuel or battery issues with Commissioner Barrell highlighting that Marine Rescue NSW saw a spike in grounding incidents last month. "Our crews responded to almost 30 groundings across the state which are avoidable incidents.

"Boaters need to be aware of the tides, the environment and the conditions to avoid grounding their vessel and potentially ending up in an emergency situation," Commissioner Barrell said.

Eight MAYDAY and five PAN PAN calls were received last month with Marine Rescue NSW volunteers managing 15,926 radio calls through local unit bases and the Marine Rescue Sydney State Communications Centre at Belrose. Commissioner Barrell is encouraging all skippers to make Logging On with Marine Rescue NSW part of their pre-launch routine with the Service's volunteers keeping watch over 20,475 people on board Logged On vessels in July. "Boaters can Log On and Off with Marine Rescue NSW either via VHF channel 16 or the free Marine Rescue app. "Logging On provides details of your voyage so Marine Rescue NSW volunteers can keep watch for your safe return, if a boater doesn't return as planned a search will be initiated.

"Logging On saves precious time in the event of a life-threatening emergency on our waterways," Commissioner Barrell said.

Marine Rescue Lake Macquarie was the busiest of the Service's 46 units completing 38 search and rescue missions in July. Volunteers at Marine Rescue Sydney (State Communications Centre) were kept busy with 32 responses while for the first time in Marine Rescue NSW history, Port Kembla was the third busiest unit in NSW with 16 missions.
